LAST NIGHT'S STORM.

Damage Done by the Gales in This Section.

A BUILDING BLOWN DOWN

The Site of the Shenandoah Manufacturing
Company's Factory a Scene of Wreckage.
Many Large Trees Uprooted and a Root
Swept From a House.

WIND and rain had full sway last night and this morning. The gales swept over the town with fury and in several places they left evidence of visits. Trees were uprooted, houses unroofed and many gardens destroyed. The great rush of water carried mud and sand into the cellars in such quantities that many drains were blocked and the streets became flooded. Supervisor Llewellyn had men out all night trying to keep culverts open, and this vigilance served to ward off considerable damage.

The point where the storm did the most damage was at the north end of Emerick street, where the factory of the Shenandoah Manufacturing Company is being constructed. The carpenters started on the building during the latter part of last week and had succeeded in getting a good part of the frame work for the first and second stories in shape. Last night one gale struck the Emerick street side of the structure and threw it in a heap upon the foundation walls. Half an hour later another gale struck the rear part of the frame work and laid it in the road way of Apple alley. The rain poured into the basement in torrents and the place was filled up to the openings left for the window casings. A very dilapidated picture was presented this morning to the hundreds of people who flocked to the place. The clearing of the debris and re-building will delay the contractor considerably.

At about 2 o'clock this morning the anxiety of the timid people was increased by the sounding of the fire alarm bell. As the taps were irregular the firemen did not respond, and their belief that the alarm was due to an accident of some kind to the system was confirmed later by the discovery of a broken wire in the first ward.

A tall tree at the rear of the company houses on North Emerick street was laid low, and this morning it was hauled away by a team from one of the collieries. The gale struck the Grant property on West Oak street with terrible fury and completely uprooted a large tree. The flower beds and bushes on the grounds suffered extensively.

A house on South Jardin street owned by John Lewis, the carpenter, was unroofed and many of the windows in the house were wrecked. Fortunately no one was injured. The house referred to has been unroofed three times within a few months.

The extensive bill boards on Centre street, near the Lehigh railroad, were also laid low. A bed spring and a chair were among the wrecked pieces found on Centre street this morning.

A large tree that stood in front of the Titman property at the corner of White and Coal streets was blown down and a tree in front of John D. Davis' property on South Jardin street was also laid low.

Considerable damage was done to the telephone lines and when manager Frank McDermott opened the office this morning he found the system demoralized. He soon succeeded in getting messages through to Pottsville, however.

The people residing in the vicinity of the Lithuanian church on South Jardin street were in a nervous state last night. Recollections of the effect the last heavy storm had upon the steeples of the church caused several to leave their houses and seek shelter for the night with friends in other parts of the town.

Dr. Stein tells of an experience he had on Centre street this morning. He received a call at 2 o'clock when the storm was at its height. When passing the Harrington building something struck his umbrella with such force as to almost knock it from his hand. The doctor jumped aside and barely escaped another flying object. He sought the shelter of a doorway and did so just in time to escape a shower of objects. They were flower pots blown from a ledge at the second story of the Harrington building.

After the flower pots stopped dropping the doctor started on his journey again but had walked but a few steps when he saw something coming towards him along the pavement. It alternately rolled, banged and slid. One moment it appeared to be a white object and the next moment it appeared to be black. "Spooks!" said the doctor to himself. Nearer and nearer the object approached at a rapid speed until at last the M. D. was obliged to take a long and high jump to save his skin. The object was one of Jim McElheny's signs.

The grand old tree which has thrown its friendly shade over Maurice Morrison's hotel on East Centre street for so many years was unable to withstand the force of the gales last night and reluctantly laid down upon the street.

OBE'S OBSERVATIONS.

What He Sees and Hears During His Travels.

The organization of the Board of Health has already had many substantial beneficial effects upon the borough, but no part of town has been more benefited than that part of Market alley which lies between Centre and Lloyd streets. The alley at this point was looked upon as one of the most filthy of the public thoroughfares, but when the parties who were responsible for its condition realized that the Board of Health had been organized and was in the business to stay, with the good solid backing of the state law behind it they lost no time in remedying the evil and on Saturday the clean condition of Market alley was remarked by many.

We were seated in a Main street barber shop on Saturday, the barbers' busy day, and the conversation drifted to wait and patient people, when a dry goods merchant who formed one of our party said: "I have often been provoked in my store. Sometimes I have been busy waiting upon a customer when a woman would enter and in a very nervous and half excited way ask me for goods at once on a plea that she lived out of town and had to make a train. I have asked the indulgence of the customer in hand and turned to the new comer. After selling the goods desired and returning to the first customer I have noticed the nervous, hurry-up woman standing talking to some friend accidentally met for fully half an hour in front of the store. I make all my customers take their turn now."

"That is making money for the company," remarked a conductor on a Lehigh train as he finished relating an incident of the morning run. Two Italians purchased tickets for March Chunk at the Mt. Carmel station, but when the train arrived at Raven Run they made a great scramble for their trunks. The conductor tried to hold them, saying that they had not reached March Chunk; but one of the Italians explained in broken English that Raven Run was their destination, as they expected to work on the new reservoir there. They made a mistake in purchasing tickets for March Chunk and had forgotten the name of their destination until they heard the brakeman call out "Raven Run."

The dullness of midsummer trade is doubtless due in large measure to the superstition that liberal advertising in July and August does not pay. Advertising, generously and judiciously done, always pays. It is a fact worth noting in this relation that the largest dry goods advertiser in America does his heaviest advertising in the summer months.

The successful advertisers are those who have kept eternally at it. The human memory is short, and the merchant, in order to receive a share of the public patronage, must keep his business before newspaper readers. No matter how hard the times, just so many pills will be taken in a year, so many pairs of shoes worn, and so many pounds of sugar and coffee will be consumed. There may be a temporarily falling off in the demand, but it can only be for a very short time. The main question is, who shall supply the demand? If one fails to do it, another will supplant him. Patrons are easier held than gained, and for this reason it is dangerous to withdraw your business from the public view in dull times by a discontinuance of advertising. No matter how long you have been before the public as an advertiser, no matter how much you have spent to keep the goods on the market, the day on which you withdraw your advertising marks the beginning of lost ground. Rather curtail your expenses in other ways than by legitimate newspaper advertising.

The managers of the Orwigsburg fair have offered to put up $150 for a game on the grounds during the fair between Pottsville and Shenandoah. The offer was made to Manager Reber, of the former club, and he declined to consider it unless the purse could be raised to $200. This fair management refused to do.

Serious Results of a Family Quarrel.

EARLY MORNING SCENE.

Dan Dougherty Barred Rocks at the House of His Father-in-Law and Had an Unexpected Tumble While Getting Away—He Was Found by the Police.

FAMILY difficulty resulted in a serious accident to Daniel Dougherty in the First ward at an early hour this morning. Dougherty's wife left her husband's domicile and sought the friendly shelter of her father's house on East Centre street. The father is Patrick O'Brien.

At a late hour last night, despite the storm, Dougherty called at the father-in-law's house and was refused admission. The son-in-law then prepared an attack and stormed the windows and doors of the house with rocks.

Mr. O'Brien received a blow on the side of the head from a piece of rock. It caused the blood to flow from the ear, but the injury was not of a very serious character. Mr. O'Brien hurried to Justice Monaghan's office through the heavy rain and swore out a warrant for Dougherty's arrest.

As Constable Toomey and Policeman Flaherty were walking out Centre street towards the O'Brien homestead about two o'clock this morning to execute the warrant they heard a groan and upon approaching the place from which the symptoms of distress seemed to come, they found a man stretched out in the roadway and drenched by the rain.

The form was that of Dougherty. He pleaded to be taken home and when an effort was made to get him on his feet it was found he was unable to stand. The officers secured a stretcher and took Dougherty to the home of his mother on South Bower street. Dr. Stein was called and he said Dougherty's leg was broken in two places just above the ankle and just below the knee.

Dougherty was unable to say how he broke his leg. The pavement in front of the O'Brien house is from three to four feet above the level of the roadway and it is supposed that in running away after storming the house with rocks, Dougherty unintentionally stepped off the high pavement and sustained the injury.
